Race Director Certification

You do not have to take the Race Director Certification test!

USA Cycling has done away with the race directors certification test. The goal is to build a robust set of resources, but not make race directors take a test. You do still need a race directors license to take out a permit ($150). The fee is waived if you're affiliated with a USAC club. There is also no fee for a non-competitive race director license (fun ride/gran fondo), but you need to contact USAC directly (Parker) to attach this license to the non-competitive permit.

Pro-tip!

You can access your permitting forms and promoter account information by logging into the website, going to My Profile and clicking on tools. If you get frustrated navigating the new site to try and find your familiar forms and reports, simply replace the 'www' in the URL with 'legacy' to get 'legacy.usacycling.org'. These utilities will eventually be integrated into one platform, but for now that is a quick way to get to the aspects of the site that you've used in the past.

Currently, there are fewer events but a higher concentration of testing at the pro level, and more events but a lesser concentration of testing at the amateur level.

Dynamic Prize Lists

Dynamic Prize List is defined as a potentially increasing Prize List that first states a minimum prize list, based upon a minimum number of participants required for each event to be conducted.

Prize List: A race that consists of all prizes and primes arranged for in advance by the Race Director. The prize list for a race event is the sum of the prize lists for the individual races.*

Dynamic Prize List: A potentially increasing Prize List that first states a minimum prize list, based upon a minimum number of participants required, in order for each event to be conducted. Only increases to the published prize list are allowed. Increases may be based upon formulas, percentages or other calculations as long as the minimum prize list, participation numbers and the method for increasing it is clearly stated in the race flyer and race announcement.*
